A family member has died. What should I be doing about his or her superannuation?

First, you should notify us of the person's death by calling 1300 006 727. This applies to anyone with the responsibility of sorting out a deceased Member's estate.

When a MilitarySuper Member dies, his or her eligible dependants may receive a benefit. If there are no dependants, any benefit goes to his or her estate.

Benefits vary according to whether the deceased was a Contributing Member, Pensioner, or Preserved Benefit Member. For more information see The MilitarySuper Book.

What forms will I need?

If you are the spouse of a deceased contributing or Preserved MilitarySuper Member, you will need to complete and submit the form M80, Spouse's Benefits.

If you are the spouse of a deceased MilitarySuper Pensioner, you will need to complete and submit the form MS2SP, Spouse and Children of a Pensioner.

Children of a deceased contributing or preserved Member where there is no dependant spouse should complete and submit the form M85, Child's Benefits.

Children of a deceased Pensioner where there is no dependant spouse will need to complete and submit the form M28, Orphan of a Pensioner.

Where there is no spouse the person handling the estate of a deceased Member should use the form DM90, Estate Benefits. This should be used in conjunction with form M85, Child's Benefits, where a deceased Member is survived by a dependent child but not a dependent spouse.

All these forms are available from ComSuper or through the MilitarySuper website www.militarysuper.gov.au. If you can access the website, you can fill in a form online, then print it and post it to us.
